UN Chief expresses concern over southern Sudan violence

VoAnews.com - UNSG Ban Ki-moon says he is deeply concerned about the deadly attacks in the Upper Nile region in southern Sudan that have killed 25 people and displaced dozens more. Mr. Ban said in a statement Sunday that the GoSS should "re-double its efforts to ensure the protection of civilians" and work with the U.N. to resolve the root causes of the violence.

Military officials in southern Sudan said the clashes began Friday when heavily armed fighters attacked an ethnic Dinka village in Bony-Thiang, killing 20 civilians. The officials said Dinka villagers retaliated Saturday by attacking a Shilluk tribal settlement nearby, killing five people.

Also Sunday, the World Health Organization warned that another part of southern Sudan is at high risk for epidemics because of attacks by Ugandan rebels. The agency said the health care system in Ezo County (Sudan) has been disrupted by repeated attacks in the area from the rebel Lord's Resistance Army.

A WHO spokesman in Geneva, Paul Garwood, said the LRA pillaged health care facilities in August and made it impossible for doctors to carry out an immunization program. He said this has left many young children susceptible to measles, polio and other life-threatening diseases.

Sudan to seek clarification from US envoy over new US policy

Sudan is determined to seek clarification from US Special Envoy Scott Gration on what incentives and pressures the new US policy on the country holds, Akhir Lahza reports.

Foreign Minister Deng Alor said that Special Envoy Gration is expected in Khartoum on Wednesday and would brief the government on these issues. The Minister refused to brand US policies on Sudan as "contradicting".

NCP accuses SPLM of trying to weaken the north

The head of the NCP’s foreign relations committee, Mustafa Osman Ismail, says his party will be the first to support the newly signed SPLM-Umma agreement if it is in the interest of security and stability in the country, Al-Ahdath reports. In press statements yesterday, Osman pointed out that the SPLM’s strategy is based on weakening northern Sudan and the NCPA through provoking states like the US to impose sanctions and isolate northern Sudan.

Nafei Ali Nafei accuses SPLA of destabilizing southern Sudan

Nafei Ali Nafei, Assistant to the President of the Republic, has downplayed recent accusations by SPLA Spokesperson Kuol Deim that the NCP and the SPLM-DC were training a 3,500-strong militia force in the White Nile area to distribute weapons to Shilluk tribesmen of Upper Nile State in order to destabilize the south. Al-Ahdath reports that Nafei pointed out that these were baseless accusations and that the SPLA could not hide the weapons they provide to the armed groups in Darfur and the tribal militias that are responsible for the current state of instability in southern Sudan. “Every Sudanese knows that the SPLA is responsible for destabilizing southern Sudan,” he said.
Lack of full oil data threatens Sudan peace: NGO

(AFP) A failure to provide full oil production figures in Sudan threatens a fragile north-south peace deal, the advocacy and investigative group Global Witness warned in a report on Monday.

The London-based organisation said there were "serious questions" about the fair sharing of oil revenues -- since oil is drilled in the south but controlled and sold only by former civil war enemies in the north.

"Unless the government of GoSS and Sudanese citizens can verify that the revenue sharing is fair, mistrust will grow and the peace agreement could be jeopardised," said Rosie Sharpe, who penned the report. According to the report, oil production figures from south Sudan released by Khartoum were lower than those provided by the companies which drilled the oil, by some 9-14 percent in 2007 and 26 percent in 2005.

However, figures for oil drilled only in the north -- and therefore outside the revenue sharing deal -- do approximately match those provided by drilling companies, the report added.

President Al-Bashir offered concessions to South on referendum

Sudantribune.com 06/09/09 – President Al-Bashir offered the SPLM concessions that could pave the way for their secession in 2011, but at a price.

Both sides disagree over the percentage of votes required to call the referendum a pro-independence, the population of southerners allowed to participate and the post-independence arrangements including the share of national debt to be carried over by the south.

An official in the Sudanese Presidency who asked not to be named told Sudan Tribune that Bashir told FVP Salva Kiir Mayardit in Khartoum prior to the SPLM political bureau meetings in Juba last month that the NCP would make "radical" concessions on all outstanding issues on the CPA up to and including the referendum in return for SPLM support for an Al-Bashir candidacy for President of the Republic come the April 2010 elections. The SPLM has not made any decisions on their nominee to run for the president.

Another official at the SPLM political bureau confirmed to Sudan Tribune that Bashir’s offer was discussed during their August meetings, but was turned down on the grounds that "the NCP cannot be trusted to follow through on their promises."

Southern Sudan discusses misunderstandings with Kenya

Sudantribune.com 05/09/09 – The Government of Southern Sudan (GoSS) has discussed the misunderstandings between the semi-autonomous region and Kenya after occurrences of several deadly incidents at their common border.

Misseriya leaders are refusing to cooperate with the 8-member Abyei border demarcation committee formed by the Presidency in the wake of the Abyei border ruling, Al-Rai Al-Aam reports. Musa Hamadein, the key member of the Misseriya Association, said that the Misseriya are requesting that the 1956 borders be defined first before the AAA border demarcation committee could set to work. Anti-government graffiti appears on Sudanese capital walls
Al-Watan (via BBC Monitoring) 06/09/9 - The last time people saw the walls of houses and schools used for slogans attacking regimes and governments was before the uprising in 1985 when the Communists and Ba'athist bombarded the Numayri regime with criticisms and political slogans that did nothing but allow for the opposition to let off steam and of course disfigured walls! Funnily enough, the two bigger parties, the National Ummah Party and Democratic Unionist Party, do not have a culture of expressing their opposition by writing on walls! This applies to the National Islamic Front!

A while ago local authorities launched an intensive campaign against bill posters and adverts for events and attempted to end this harmful practice that affects the public appearance.

Unfriendly relations with media in South Sudan
Sudantribune.com (via UNMIS southern Sudan Media Monitoring) 06/09/09 - Media in the world’s democratic countries is treated with respect as the fourth organ of government. Its activities are always developed and promoted, not suppressed. South Sudan also claims to be a democratic nation in the making, at least in principle. Its leadership at the executive, legislative and judiciary organs has been trying to build a good relationship with this fourth arm of government since 2005. But something has begun to go wrong this week.
