Jan Eliasson and Salim Ahmed Salim expected in Khartoum next week

(AlAyaam) The Security Council will today listen to a briefing Secretary-General Ban Ki-Moon over his visit to Africa and his endeavours to seek solutions to the crisis in Darfur.

The Secretary-General has also announced that envoy Jan Eliasson and African Union’s Salim Ahmed Salim will be travelling to Khartoum within the forthcoming week to speed up the peace process on Darfur.

Justice Minister el-Mardi urges UN to prosecute peacekeepers over "sexual violations"

(AlQuwat AlMusulaha; Ihtibaha et al) Speaker at a symposium yesterday on legal protection of children, justice minister Mohamed Ali el-Mardi called on the UN to retract a recent UNICEF report blaming the SAF of committing some crimes and to file a formal apology to the SAF.

He said that the UNICEF report was very damaging to the SAF’s reputation that “represents the conduct of all the people of Sudan”.

The minister pointed out that international statistics indicate a great number of violations and harassment of children, including by those who are supposed to protect them.

He called upon the UN to instead serve out maximum penalties to the UN soldiers allegedly involved in acts of misconduct in southern Sudan so that such acts are not repeated in Sudanese society.
On his part, the spokesman for the SAF pointed out that the UNICEF report was meant to cover up the allegations of misconduct committed by UN forces in southern Sudan. He said that the legal authorities in the country have not received any such allegations against the SAF.

UN and the US warn of security threat against western interests in Sudan

(All major local dailies) The issue of a UN Security Advisory to her staff in Sudan has been picked up by all newspapers in the country and has featured as a major headliner and lead story in most dailies. Below are some excerpts.

AlSudani daily quotes Spokesperson Radhia Achouri as acknowledging yesterday that the UN has circulated a security advisory to her staff asking them to be vigilant because of potential threats targeting a number of western countries. She pointed out that this is an internal issue pertaining to staff security.

She pointed out that the UN has been issuing such advisories asking staff to be vigilant on a number of incidents including when public demonstrations are taking place.

She further pointed out that contrary to reports, the recent advisory did not say that UN officials have warned of an increasing threat from Al Qaeda and Islamist groups against the western presence in Sudan.

Apart from mentioning Ms. Achouri declining to comment on the issue, AlHayat daily says that the UN renewed the security advisory yesterday warning staff of possible attacks by extremist groups on the UNMIS and western interests.

The paper goes on to say that the office of the spokesperson at the US Embassy in Khartoum issued a statement yesterday informing staff and UNMIS staff that it has received confirmed information on a terrorist cell in Sudan plotting against westerners in the country. The spokesperson at the US Embassy reportedly said that the US Embassy has received “half a dozen” letters of such threats since the beginning of this year.

But AlSahafa daily quotes Alio Ayang Alio, state minister for the Ministry of the Interior as having belittled these warnings as not worthy of comment. He pointed out that the “interests” referred to in the advisory are also the country’s interests and should be protected.

On the other hand, Sudan's representative at the UN accused some departments within the UN of being “extensions of hostile western intelligence offices” in Sudan. He pointed out that these warnings of an imminent threat targeting westerners in Sudan are part of a clear plan intended to cause anarchy in Sudan.

Ambassador AbdelMahmoud AbdelHaleem expressed regrets that the relevant authorities within the UN would fall prey to such hostile western intelligence reports and called upon these authorities to form mechanisms to investigate such reports instead of depending on such reports aimed at fuelling anti-Sudan sentiments. He went on to say that such reports of a threat to westerners in Sudan also reflects the hopes of these hostile parties that it would help realise their dreams for a UN force to be deployed in Darfur.

He advised the UN to desist from such statements.

On its part, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs has expressed doubts over the veracity of such reports and says they do not reflect the facts on the ground and are based on wrong information.

MoFA spokesperson Ambassador Ali el-Sadiq pointed out that such reports only serve to increase the tensions on the security situation in Darfur and have adverse effects on the UN’s work in Darfur. He also denied the presence of Al Qaeda elements in Sudan.

He pointed out that the fact that the advisory does not contain details of what terrorist group or approximate dates for their attacks only magnify why these warnings should not be taken seriously.

Bangladeshi peacekeepers in Sudan begin rotation - paper

New Age via BBC Monitoring The first rotation of Bangladesh battalion's UN peace keeping mission to Sudan began Sunday night.

As part of his six-point oath in Hindi, the president, who recalled Gen K. Rebel NRF criticizes China’s position on Sudan’s Darfur

The front, which comprises rebel groups opposed to the Abuja Agreement, accused the Chinese government of total bias on Khartoum’s side, without paying attention to the genocide, war crimes, and blatant violations of human rights committed in Darfur by the regime.

China sending mixed signals on Sudan - US

(Reuters) US State Department spokesman Sean McCormack described Hu’s visit to Sudan as a "mixed bag".

The Chinese president raised the issue of Darfur with Bashir but he also signed several economic deals with Sudan, including an interest-free loan of 100 million yuan ($12.9 million) for Sudan to build a new presidential palace. He also wrote off up to $70 million in Sudanese debts to China.

"There have been some mixed signals, obviously. On the one hand it is very positive that President Hu raised these issues but on the other hand there are other signals — Chinese investment and building a new presidential palace," said McCormack.

"China obviously has its own reasons for doing that but we are going to continue working closely with the Chinese as well as others to bring that diplomatic pressure on the Sudanese to allow in that AU-UN hybrid force," said McCormack.
