Sudantribune.com
Juba, 10/11/09 —The SPLM has called for more logistical support to the Abyei border demarcation technical team saying that lack of logistics has delayed the ongoing demarcation process.

"The border demarcation process is going on well but it is encountering a number of hurdles which include logistics. As I am told one of the helicopters provided by United Nations Mission in Sudan (UNMIS) developed technical problem requiring time to fix it," said Dr. Luka Biong Deng, GoSS’ Minister of Presidential Affairs and a leading SPLM member.

He pointed out that the team has not reported any serious impediment to their work since resuming activities in late October.

The members of the joint team have started demarcating Abyei boundaries in the east after which they will go further north, he said adding that recent security concerns in the extreme north of Abyei town are being addressed by the Joint Integrated Unit (JIU) forces in collaboration with UNMIS force. Security of the team is no longer a concern impeding daily activities; they are being looked after by the JIU and are housed in Abyei town from where they go to field every day, he said.

Minister Biong also called on the team to closely work with local administration on issues that affect them on daily basis. He went further calling on local chiefs to extend them similar support particularly during demarcation process.

SPLM nudges for inclusion of more Sudanese abroad in voter registration
Sudantribune.com Juba, 10/11/09 - Leading SPLM members are pushing for the inclusion of more countries with populations of southern Sudanese in the voter registration process.

The move comes after the publication by the National Election Commission (NEC) of a list of countries that include Kuwait, UAE, Saudi Arabia, Egypt, Qatar, the Sultanate of Oman, Bahrain, the UK, Belgium (for all Western Europe) and Washington, New York, Los Angles for the USA. Their argument was based on the premise that most Sudanese in the Arab Gulf countries cited in the NEC list are from northern Sudan.

Suzan Jambo, SPLM Secretary for external relations, in the southern sector, says voter registration for Diasporas should not be limited to countries in the NEC list. "It has to be extended to other countries hosting number of Sudanese abroad," she said reiterating inclusion of more countries to the list.

Neighboring countries like Uganda, Kenya Tanzania, Ethiopia, Eritrea, Congo just to name a few still has a number of southern Sudanese residents with refugee or legal immigrant status.

China defends decision not to veto Darfur ICC referral

Sudantribune.com Khartoum, 10/11/09 - The Chinese government has defended its decision not to block a UN Security Council resolution in 2005 referring the situation in Darfur to the International Criminal Court (ICC).

Beijing, despite being a strong ally of Khartoum, abstained from voting on the resolution outraging Sudanese officials who accused China of failing to "protect its friends".

Chinese prime minister Wen Jiabao was asked by reporters following the opening ceremony of the China-Africa Forum last Sunday in the Egyptian resort of Sharm el-Sheikh, why his government “sometimes declines to give full support to Africa” citing the ICC referral case.

“The blame you [reporter] laid on China over the issue of the Sudan is unfounded. Besides, I wish to emphasize that China’s position on the UN Security Council reform is consistent and clear-cut. The Security Council should increase the say and representation of developing countries, particularly African countries. We have done a lot to achieve this goal,” Jiabao said.

The Sudanese second Vice President Ali Osman Mohamed Taha told Sudan’s cabinet he had Chinese assurances that resolution 1593 would not be passed, a source close to the presidency told Reuters on December 17 2005.

“He was confident it would not get through and told them not to worry,” he said. Their abstention rather than a veto embarrassed Taha within the government, the presidency source said.

Sudan to close down Darfur IDP camps in early 2010: official

Sudantribune.com Khartoum, 10/11/09 - Speaking to Radio Miraya FM, HAC Commissioner Hasabu Abdel-Rahman said that the Sudanese government has plans to close down displaced camps in the greater Darfur region by early 2010.

The independent Al-Sahafa newspaper quoted Abdel-Rahman as saying that his ministry is implementing a policy of “converting the aid money to a service program to rehabilitate villages through gradual transformation to construction stages”.

The Sudanese official disclosed that the government is building 20,000 housing units for the IDP’s in the capital towns of El-Fasher, El-Geneina and Nyala.

He added that the IDP’s will be given the choice of either to move to their villages or to the new housing complexes but did not specify what consequences those who reject these options will face.

Darfur rebel groups today reacted angrily to the government’s announcement.

“The government wants to send our people back to the same places they fled from so that they can get killed again under the whole world eyes,” SLM’s Abdul-Wahid Al-Nur said.

“I want to remind the government that international conventions prohibit forcing IDP’s to repatriate” he added.

The Darfur Justice and Equality Movement (JEM) spokesperson Ahmed Hussein said the move is a “cover-up for a new crime the government intends to commit similar to the one in Kalma camp [August 2008 killings of IDP's by government troops]. It is classic of them to do so”.

“This is clearly and unequivocally a war crime what they are trying to do. They are taking advantage of the world easing pressure on them and Hasabu himself is a security officer not a humanitarian one worst than Haroun” Hussein added.
The JEM official urged the international community to intervene and press Khartoum to reverse its decision.
