Presidency to meet in two days for discussion on referendum

Al-Ayyam 16/8/10 – The Presidency is to hold a meeting during the two coming days to discuss the issues of referendum and border demarcation. FVP Salva Kiir Mayardit is expected to arrive in Khartoum during the two coming days to take part in the meeting.

Meanwhile, the South Sudan Referendum Commission submitted an official letter to the Presidency saying time remains is insufficient to conduct the referendum. According to SMC, a government source revealed that the Commission submitted the letter to the Presidency since last week containing justifications that it would be difficult for it to organize the process within the remaining time.

The source expects the presidency to name a Secretary-General for the Commission as quick as possible.

Referendum chief threatens to resign

Al-Rai Al-Aam 16/8/10 – Head of the National Referendum Commission Mohamed Ibrahim Khalil has threatened to resign, saying the southern members of the Commission are seeking to undermine ongoing preparations to conduct the process by preventing representatives of the North from occupying key positions in the Commission.

According to Sudan Tribune website 15/8/10, Khalil told Reuters in an interview that the five southerners were voting as a block to prevent any northerner taking the key post of secretary-general, a principle he said he could not accept.

The secretary-general controls the funds and budget of the commission and south Sudan's ruling party has warned the deadlock could derail the vote.

"If things continue like this I will just excuse myself that’s all," Khalil added. "This [commission] can only work if we can get people to be cooperative, to have mutual trust ... and to approach things objectively from a national point, not from the point of view of north and south," Khalil said.

"With things as they are, all resolutions would be a foregone conclusion," he said. "The five [southern] members are determined to vote as a block — to me this is just not acceptable, it makes nonsense of the whole process."

Khalil said of the 63 positions outlined in the Referendum Law, 59 had already been filled by southerners. He said he had left the problem for the presidency to decide.

"I am not prepared to head a commission that works this way. With things as they are, all resolutions would be a foregone conclusion," he said.
But SPLM official Pagan Amum said Khalil showed "tendencies of dictatorship" for ignoring the majority opinion in the body.

"If these problems are not resolved quickly the referendum commission will definitely fail to deliver on organising the referendum," he added.

Meanwhile, Al-Rai Al-Aam reports that Head of GoSS Mission in Washington Ezekiel Jatkoth has called on the international community to salvage the CPA and considered any delay a "declaration of war".

In a related development, NCP political secretary Ibrahim Ghandour said that "Islamists" alone should not be blamed for partition of the country, pointing out that all the Sudanese political forces have agreed to self-determination for the South. According to Al-Wifaq, Ghandour, who was speaking in an interview to the London-based Al-Hayat newspaper, warned of a renewed war if referendum is conducted in the absence of a demarcated North-South boarder.

NCP secretary for organizations, Qutbi Al-Mahdi, said the Referendum Commission is functioning under difficult circumstances so it has the right to request delay for technical reasons, adding that the remaining time is not enough to conduct a fair referendum reflective of the will of the southerners. However, he said, it is up to the two partners to decide.

Reportedly, the NCP has warned that declaration of independence of the South from within the parliament will be considered a violation of the CPA.

Khalil blasted comments of the Governor of Eastern Equatoria State, in which he called on citizens of the state to vote for secession so as to get rid of what he called the "northern oppression ".

Khalil said that such statements might raise troubles and consider them as form of intimidations that go against the Constitution, which guarantees freedom of choice to vote for either unity or separation. In response, the Governor of Eastern Equatoria Lobong Logoare denied calling for or forcing the citizens of his state to vote for separation.

UNHCR officials also declined to comment.

An aid worker, however, revealed that some security personnel walked into the offices of the ICRC in West Darfur and asked the director to leave within 24 hours without giving her written notice. The head of the ICRC in Zalengei was also expelled last week.

Earlier, the United Nations Under-Secretary-General for Humanitarian Affairs and Relief Coordination, John Holmes, urged the Sudanese authorities to allow humanitarian workers to enter the camp in Darfur.

The Deputy Governor of Southern Darfur state, Abdul Karim Moussa Kasha, said that the motive of the group, that kidnapped two UNAMID officers on Saturday, is material and not political.

In an interview with Radio Miraya Abdel Karim described the UNAMID, as incapable of protecting its employees in Darfur, urging the Mission to reconsider their currently operating security mechanism?

He said that UNAMID has become a burden on the Government forces to protect; pointing out that the state Government is continuously exerting efforts to arrest the perpetrators as soon as possible.

NCP condemns move to establish JEM base in Uganda

Al-Rai Al-Aam 16/08/10 – Prominent NCP figure, Qutbi Al-Mahdi, has condemned reports that JEM sought to establish a military base in neighbouring Uganda, describing the move as a threat to peace and stability in the Continent and called on the AU to take note of such actions by some African leaders which might negatively impact peace and stability in the region.

The Parliamentary Committee on Darfur Peace has meanwhile described these latest reports as a hostile act by Uganda against Sudan and the region at large. Committee Deputy Chairman Al-Fateh Izzaldine pointed out that Museveni has backed rebellion in Rwanda and other African states.

Quoting JEM Spokesperson Ahmed Hussein, Ajras Al-Hurriya reports however that the JEM says reports of its intentions to open a military base in Uganda are “totally baseless”. “It suffices to say that the source of this report is the SMC,” the JEM Spokesperson said as he lashed out at the pro-government news outlet.

The JEM Spokesperson also accused Khartoum of supporting the LRA and named Sudanese army officers who reportedly participated actively in LRA campaigns in Darfur.

_Sudan Tribune website_ 15/8/10 reported that JEM strongly denied the veracity of a report published by a pro-government media source on its delegates visiting Uganda and striking a deal with its president to setup a military base there and receive arms supplies.

On Saturday, Sudan Media Center (SMC), which is closely linked to the country’s National Intelligence and Security Services (NISS), carried a report alleging that a delegation of JEM comprising Ahmad Adam Bakhit, Mansur Arbab and Ahmad Nuqua Lisan had “secretly visited Kampala last week” and met with Uganda’s President Yoweri Museveni “in the presence of an SPLM’s representative”.

"JEM categorically denies the reports appearing in local press in Khartoum on Sunday 15 August, which says that a delegation of JEM met with the Ugandan president Museveni,” declared a press release on JEM’s website.

The movement went on to discredit the report as “a flat-out lie” and a “figment of the imagination of SMC” which “built a career in fabricating news and concocting tales and theatres.”

JEM claimed that the government was behind this report to cover up its "conclusively-evidenced" involvement in supporting groups rebelling against the Government of Southern Sudan.

_Darfur kidnappers file demands to release Jordan’s peacekeepers - report_
_Sudan Tribune website_ 15/8/10 - The kidnappers of the two peacekeepers who were abducted on Saturday have submitted their ransom demands to UNAMID, said a report published by a Jordanian daily newspaper.

In its Monday edition the Amman-based daily, Addastour, reported that a Jordanian security source had told them that the abductors have asked the UNAMID to implement a number of demands before the two Jordanian police advisers are released. The newspaper did not elaborate on the details on these demands.

Jordan’s Minister of State for Media Affairs Ali Al-Ayed told the official news agency Petra that the Jordanian foreign ministry is following the situation closely in coordination with UNAMID. The two officers were not targeted because of their nationality but because they are part of the hybrid mission, he added.

The two peacekeepers, Ahmed Abdel-Jabbar Al-Qaisi and Nabil Saeed Al-Kilani, were abducted on Saturday while they had been walking to a UNAMID transport point near their residence in Nyala, the capital of South Darfur state.

Reacting to the abduction, Paris-based rebel leader Abdel Wahid Al-Nur condemned the kidnapping of the two peacekeepers and urged to release them.

Al-Nur accused the Sudanese government and its militias in the region of abducting the two Jordanian peacekeepers saying, "This operation is part of a scenario designed by the Sudanese security aiming at destabilizing the security situation in the whole region in order to dismantle the IDPs camps in Darfur".

The rebel leader called on the international community to react swiftly to humanitarian situation in the region pointing out that the IDP camps suffer from food shortages and epidemic diseases.

"This is the case not only in Kalma camp but also in other camps like Wadi Saleh in the remote area of West Darfur near the border with the Central African Republic," he said. Adding that the "World should not be an accomplice by its silence and participate in the ongoing Final Solution in Darfur".
