Messeriya chief Mukhtar Babu Nimir told the newspaper that their tribe, at a meeting yesterday in Mujlad with Abyei Chief Administrator, native administrators and parties concerned, declared its rejection of the ruling. “We have informed the SRSG that we are committed to 1.1.56 border,” he said, describing the PCA Award as unfair to the Misseriya because it would deprive them of their summer grazing land. “We have made our position clear on the borders and the solution lies with the Government,” he added.

SRSG urges Southern Kordofan, Abyei to continue dialogue on referendum

Al-Tayar 7/9/10 – SRSG Haile Menkerios has urged southern Kordofan state government and Abyei administration to continue their dialogue to agree on post-referendum arrangements to sustain the peaceful co-existence between the two areas. “Nomination of Commission secretary-general from the North unfair” – SPLM official

The Citizen 7/9/10 – Although the chairman of the South Sudan referendum Commission Mohamed Ibrahim Khalil said the nomination of referendum Secretary-General Osman Al-Nujoomi was unanimous, some SPLM politicians are still pessimistic that referendum results would be rigged in favour of the North.

Speaking the Citizen yesterday in an exclusive interview at the Southern Sudan Legislative Assembly, SPLM member George Costa Faustino said it is unfair that the referendum secretary is nominated from the North, adding “with chairman and secretary positions given to northerners who are against freedom and progress of the South, referendum results will turn out to be in favour of the North”. Faustino said the seat of chairmanship should have been enough for Khartoum Government.

Sudan hopes to double gold output to offset oil risk

Reuters 6/9/10 - Sudan plans to more than double its gold output in two years partly to help make up for a possible fall in oil revenues if its crude-producing south chooses to secede in a looming referendum, the minerals minister said on Monday.

Abdel Baqi al-Jailani told Reuters in an interview Sudan could raise annual production to more than 40 tonnes by 2012 by regulating tens of thousands of small-scale prospectors, many of whom currently smuggle out finds, and by licensing out new blocks to global mining firms.

His estimate of current annual production at around 20 tonnes -- far above some industry estimates of between 4 and 6 tonnes a year -- included new data he said showed small "artisanal" mining operations already registered with the government produced 10 tonnes of gold between January and June this year.
Jailani said he was currently in discussion with mining companies from Austria, Australia and the United States, despite heavy trade sanctions imposed by Washington, but declined to name the companies.
