Constituency announcement depends on end to census dispute - NEC
Al-Sahafa reports NEC Deputy Chairman Abdullah Ahmed Abdullah has said the geographical constituencies would be determined and announced after the ongoing controversy over census results are taken into consideration. He affirmed that a limited amendment would be introduced in the electoral timetable, saying it is necessitated by the delay of release of the census results. However, he said the amendment would have no impact on the key elements of the timetable such as polling and the final day of elections. Meanwhile, Abdullah hinted the possibility of postponement of constituency delimitation within the North-South border demarcation areas but said the matter could be addressed by the Presidency. He has denied any intention by the NEC to postpone elections or to issue a new timetable, saying only amendments would be introduced to the schedule.

Nafie reveals European scenario to postpone elections
Addressing a rally of support for President Al-Bashir at the Friendship Hall yesterday, the Presidential Assistant Nafi Ali Nafi said those who are questioning the census results are not doing so on valid grounds, Al-Rai Al-Aam reports. “Elections will never be postponed,” he added. “We are currently monitoring a European scenario intended to postpone elections. Some party leaders have visited some of those countries as part of the postponement plan. Changing this government by means other than elections is impossible,” Nafie told the crowd. “Neither national nor interim government will be formed. The present government can only be changed through elections. Any internal or external attempts to change the government by means other than the ballot will boomerang,” Nafie said, according to Akhbar Al-Youm. Al-Ahdath reports Nafi called on the political parties not to waste time trying to disrupt elections or to question the census results. “These parties have mobilized foreign circles, UN and the ICC in an attempt to change the government,” he said.

Elections should be monitored at all levels – Turabi
Ray Al-Shaab reports PCP leader Hassan Al-Turabi has called on his party functionaries in states to monitor all levels of elections namely registration, disqualification, polling and vote count. He said if vote count does not start the moment polling ends, devils will tamper with the boxes during the night. He said Ambassadors of western countries were repeatedly asking him whether he would run or not.

SPLM requests meeting with NEC on census results
Al-Khartoum reports while SPLM announced its determination to request a meeting with the NEC for discussion on the census results, the NEC said the results had been endorsed by the Presidency but it would have no object to sit with the SPLM or any other party for discussion. Meanwhile, SPLM SG Pagan Amum has called on the NCP not to interfere in the movement’s affairs including statements by SPLM’s leaders. “SPLM is an independent party and statements of its leaders are based on the leadership’s guidance,” Amum said.

SPLM to resort to IGAD to resolve census result dispute
Al-Intibaha reports there is a strong tendency within the SPLM to take recourse to IGAD members to urge them to pressurize the government on the census results which they consider unfair. Source told the paper that southerners were angry with the census results and that SPLM is considering options including seeking the IGAD help to address the issue.
Assembly Deputy Speaker Atem Grang has described the census exercise as “a failure”.
